Welcome to KOBE

Since the 9th century, Kobe has played a critical role in shipping and trade, fostering an outward-looking spirit that encouraged it to embrace and adopt different cultures. It prospered through the shipbuilding and steel industries, and in recent years it has also focused on businesses with an eye on global expansion, such as research and development of advanced technologies in fields including medical care, IT, and new energy. Kobe remains one of the leading business bases in Japan.

As the first city in Japan to promote meetings and events, it opened Japan's first convention precinct - the Kobe Convention Center - in 1981 as part of the Portopia '81 exposition. In 2000, the Kobe Convention Bureau launched Japan's first meetings and events support package, "Meet in Kobe", to meet the needs of organisers and established Kobe as a city that understands and helps facilitate meetings and events.

In this guide, we will explore Kobe's strengths from four perspectives: PORT, LIVEABLE, MEDICAL, and DYNAMIC. As well as information about how we can support your event, we will share insights into the city, from its history to its cutting-edge technology, and its culture, food and lifestyle.

A global city that has grown as an international trading port

PORT CITY

PORT CITY

In 1868, Kobe became a major international trading port. Today, it is a cosmopolitan city, home to 1.5 million people from more than 140 countries, as well as global organisations and companies. It is fast becoming the city of choice for those attracted by its history, innovation and international mindset.

Historical industrial city

With the opening of Kobe's port, many corporations expanded internationally - including Suzuki Shoten, which became Japan's most successful trading company at that time - driving the city's economy and turning Kobe into an industrial powerhouse. Although heavy industry and manufacturing is still a key part of its economy, in the 1990s city officials started investing in new fields such as medical care and IT, turning Kobe into a leading centre for technological advances and innovation.

Major industries

Increasing international organisation presence

Starting with the inauguration of the WHO Centre for Health Development (WHO Kobe Centre - WKC)*¹ in 1996, and in 1999, the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA)*² established its Kobe office, followed by the UNDRR*³ choosing Kobe as the location for its Japan office in 2007.

- *1 Established as an integral part of the WHO Headquarters, conducting research to achieve sustainable Universal Health Coverage (UHC).
- *2 OCHA is a part of the United Nations Secretariat responsible for bringing together humanitarian actors to ensure a coherent response to emergencies.
- *3 United Nations Office for Disaster Risk Reduction. Works on building an international disaster prevention cooperation system and supporting disaster prevention policies in each country.

A symbiotic city that promotes welfare and disaster prevention

LIVEABLE CITY

Kobe was one of the first cities in Japan to focus on ensuring its citizens' wellbeing, passing its Welfare Act in 1977. After the Great Hanshin-Awaji Earthquake that struck the city in 1995, Kobe took the opportunity to reconstruct a resilient city that would improve its citizens' quality of life. Recognising the importance of residents helping each other, Kobe promoted community-level disaster prevention projects, which have been positively evaluated by the United Nations. Kobe is certified as Japan's first advanced disaster prevention "role model city".

Efforts to improve civil welfare

One initiative to come out of the Welfare Act was the creation of Kobe's "Village of Happiness", which supports independent living for vulnerable citizens, who are empowered to assist each other. Following the 2016 G7 Health Ministers' Meeting in Kobe, the city put renewed focus on citizen welfare, launching the "Dementia Kobe Model" for dementia prevention and patient support.

A city where you can connect with the community and live with peace of mind

International disaster prevention guidelines originating from Kobe

At the 2005 UN World Conference on Disaster Risk Reduction, held in Kobe, reconstruction efforts after the Great Hanshin-Awaji Earthquake were recognised and an international guideline, the Hyogo Framework for Action, was established. With world-class expertise, Kobe's knowledge has informed response guidelines and disaster prevention worldwide.

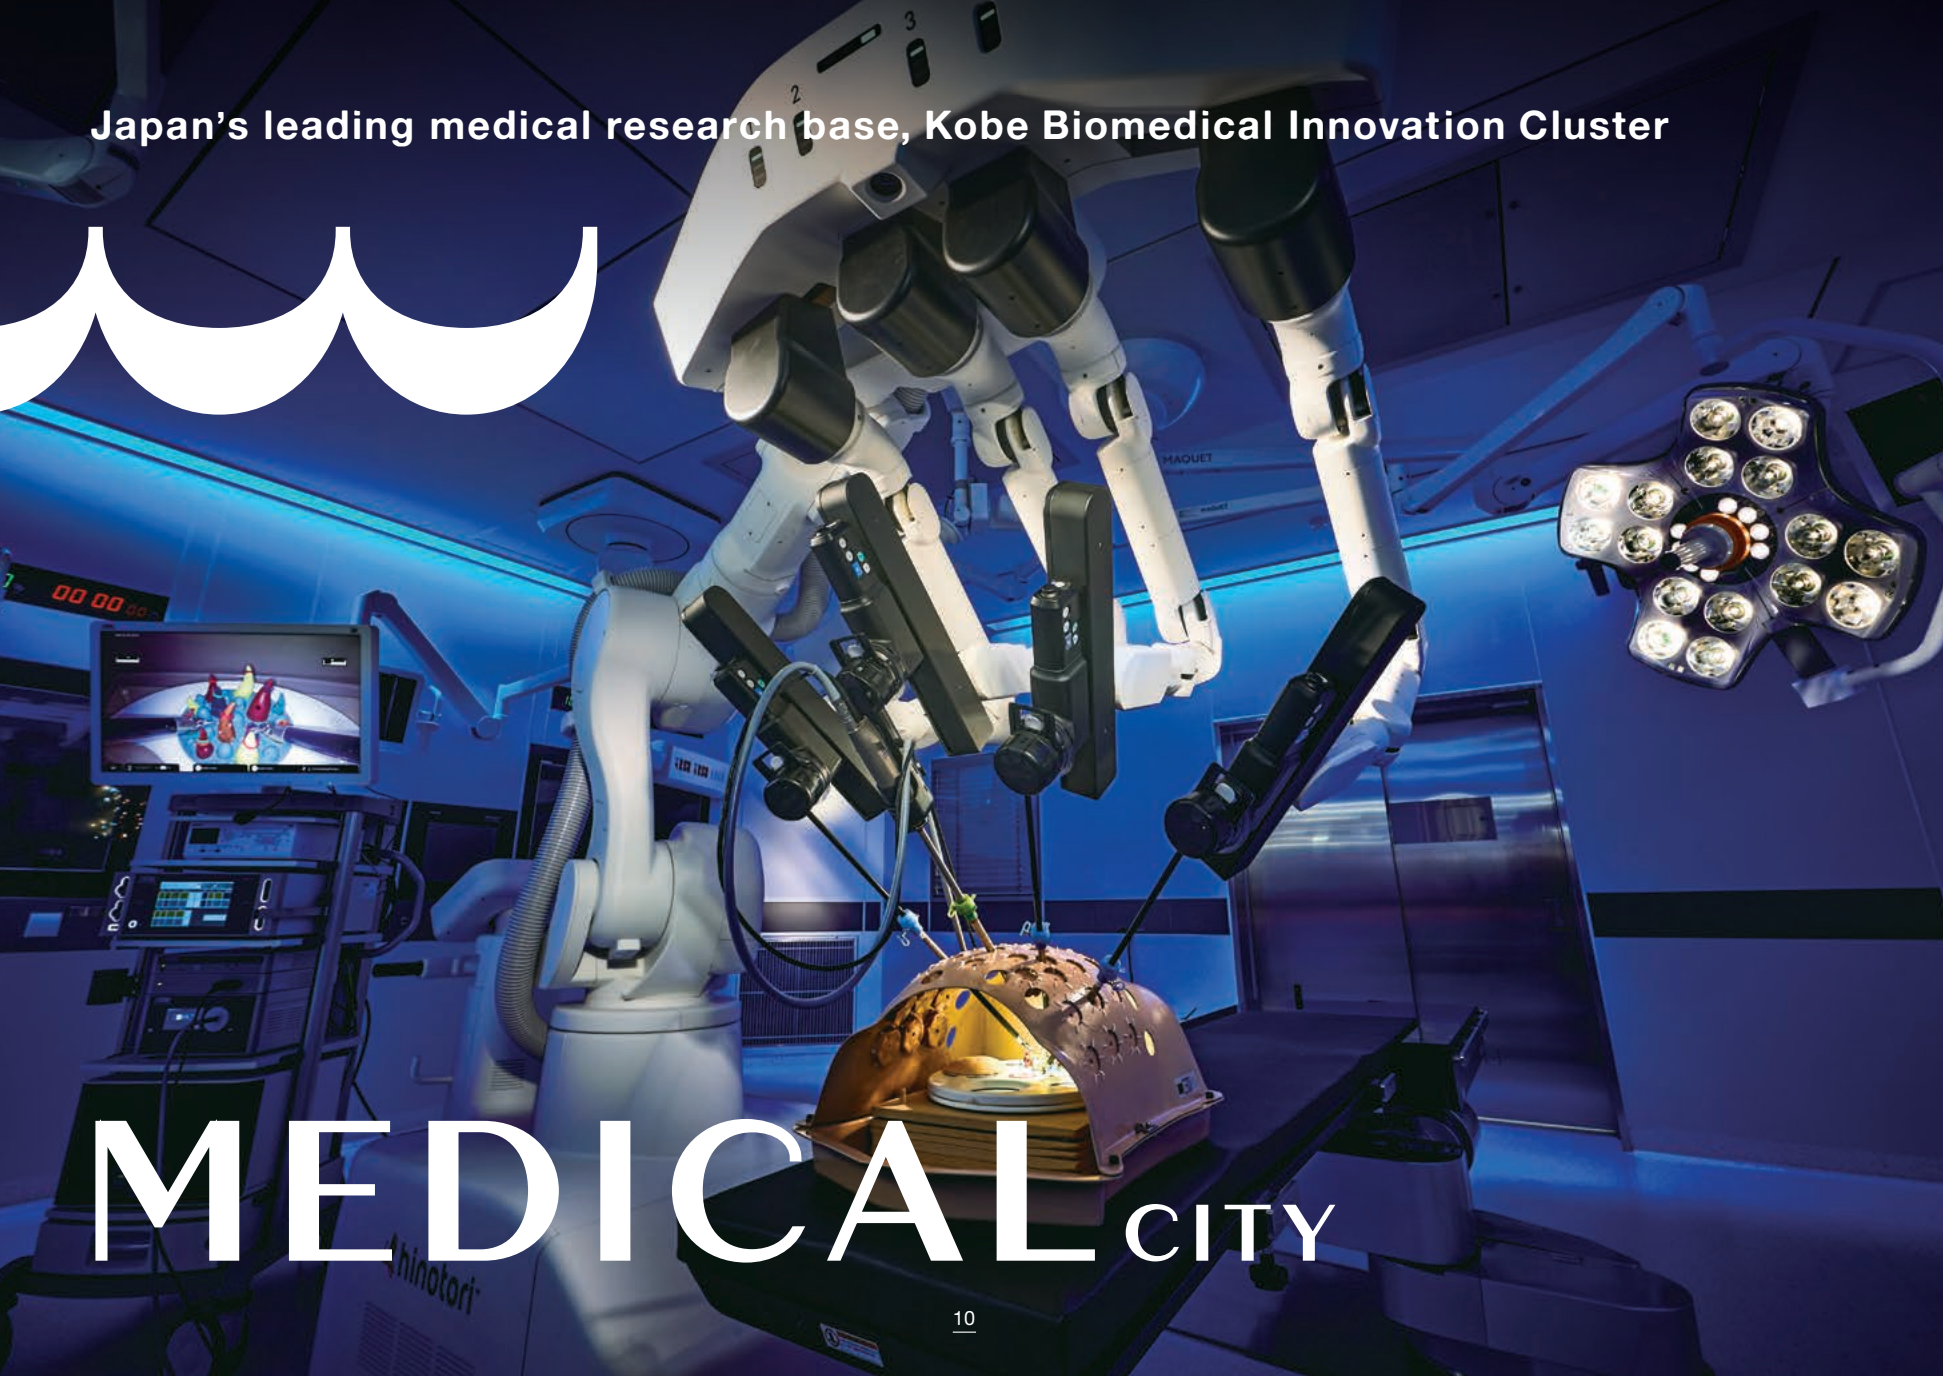

Disaster information sharing service "Kobe City Disaster Bulletin Board"

One crucial lesson the city learned from the earthquake was the importance of citizens helping each other. Combining the knowledge of the disaster prevention community and new technology, Kobe has launched the "Kobe City Disaster Bulletin Board" system via messaging app, which allows citizens to share information in the event of a disaster.

Regional cooperation system for infectious disease control

Following the G7 Health Ministers' Meeting, Kobe City strengthened its infectious disease management system. Using digital technology, the "Kobe model" promotes early detection, regional cooperation, and leads to infection control through information-sharing on the portal site.

The background image is a high-tech medical research environment. It features several white robotic arms with black joints and sensors, positioned over a surgical table. The room is dimly lit with a strong blue ambient light. In the upper right, a large, multi-lens surgical light fixture is visible. On the left, a monitor displays a 3D anatomical model of a human torso. The overall scene conveys a sense of advanced medical technology and innovation.

Japan's leading medical research base, Kobe Biomedical Innovation Cluster

MEDICAL CITY

The devastation of the Great Hanshin-Awaji Earthquake in 1995 was the catalyst to reinvent Kobe as a centre for cutting-edge life science research. Transforming a man-made island in the city harbour, it created one of the largest biomedical clusters in Japan. With universities, research institutes, hospitals, and biomedical companies all concentrated within 2 km, it is an environment that encourages collaborative research and development, and practical application. Through this collaboration, Kobe continues to generate innovative research and technologies that are changing the world.

A hotbed for the future of medicine

12,700 people work at approximately 360 organisations in the Kobe Biomedical Innovation Cluster. Fostering collaboration between academia, industry, and government, the cluster generates innovations and positions itself as a top biomedical cluster in Japan.

Fugaku, A world-leading supercomputer

Fugaku, the successor to supercomputer K, began service in March 2021. Fugaku leverages the technology, human resources, and accumulated applications developed by K, to realise a versatile and internationally competitive system. Fugaku is expected to contribute to various fields, such as drug discovery and disaster prevention.

DYNAMIC CITY

DYNAMIC CITY

Inspired by the nature that surrounds it, Kobe is committed to creating a sustainable society and is focused on enabling an environment that encourages and supports startups that share this aim. It is working towards achieving the SDGs, including promoting innovations in new energy to create a carbon-free city.

Development of next-generation energy

In 2018, Kobe conducted a test to generate power using only hydrogen. For the first time in the world, it succeeded in supplying multiple public facilities, including the Kobe International Exhibition Hall. Trials in long-distance transport and storage of hydrogen are also underway. As the only advanced-energy city in Japan to be a member of the WECP, Kobe is contributing to global energy advancement.

* World Energy Cities Partnership: Shares the services and knowledge of the energy industry and carries out exchange cooperation projects between member cities.

*Fuel cell vehicle owned by Kobe City "MIRAI"

A new business area surrounded by nature

The "Rokko Sanjo Smart City Concept" was launched in 2020, to create a new working environment in an area rich in natural beauty. Since the launch of the concept, Kobe has created the "ROKKONOMAD" shared office space in the woods of Mt. Rokko. Equipped with cutting-edge technology, this shared co-creation space provides companies and creators with a place to connect and collaborate in new ways. Recent projects have been focused on addressing key social issues such as population decline and ageing.

Various startup support programmes

Kobe City has implemented its own startup support measures that have attracted domestic and international attention, such as an entrepreneur development programme in collaboration with 500 Startups*¹ based in Silicon Valley. Recognised as a Global Startup City*² by the Cabinet Office, Kobe continues to strengthen its startup ecosystem as a key innovation hub in the Kansai region, working in collaboration with Osaka and Kyoto.

*² The Cabinet Office selects and supports plans to create startup ecosystem hubs, developed by local governments, universities, and private organizations, to build a uniquely Japanese startup ecosystem that is globally competitive

Rise in the number of international conferences held in Kobe

Internet industry experts gathered in Kobe

ICANN64 (The 64th ICANN public meeting)

 March 9-14, 2019   1,759 pax
Kobe Convention Center

One of the world's largest Internet-related conferences, ICANN, was held in Japan for the first time in 19 years, bringing 1,800 people together from 100 countries, in Kobe. The city has a special history in this field - the influential international conference "INET '92" was held in 1992, which triggered the global spread of the commercial internet. The 64th public meeting was an opportunity for internet industry pioneers to meet again in Kobe. Local volunteers helped host the event, which incorporated aspects of traditional Japanese culture, including a sake barrel breaking ceremony, using sake from Kobe.

Comments from the organiser

Participants said, "We would love the event to be held in Kobe again". In addition to the attractive location and cityscape, much appreciation goes to everyone's cooperation and hospitality in Kobe, including the venue, convention bureau, and volunteers.

ISPO returns to Kobe

ISPO 2019 (The 17th International Society for Prosthetics and Orthotics World Congress)

 October 5-8, 2019   4,596 pax
Kobe Convention Center

Thirty years after Kobe was selected as Japan's first ISPO venue the world's top prosthetics and orthotics personnel returned. Many presentations and discussions were held, including the results of cutting-edge robot research. The national, prefectural, city, and convention bureaus worked together to create a larger event, including the Hyogo Parasports Festival and the Nursing / Medical Robot Trade Fair, in which 150 companies working in prosthetics and welfare equipment participated. A joint event with the WHO Kobe Centre for Health Development was also held, and the convention closed with great success.

Comments from the organiser

Kobe was the perfect place. We mobilised many participants from other countries with generous support and cooperation from Hyogo Prefecture and Kobe City, and the bureau. We received many compliments on the hospitality.

Kobe Portopia Hotel

An academic conference on medical technology and interventional radiology (IVR) was held simultaneously on-site and online. We carried out a full range of online programmes, such as live broadcasts of presentations and discussions, and on-demand distribution allowed participants to watch recorded videos at a convenient time. On-site events were held under safe management and social distancing measures. Amid the turmoil of the COVID-19 pandemic, nearly 2,000 people participated in a pioneering approach that signalled the resumption of large-scale meetings and events in Kobe.

Comments from the organiser

We wanted to offer the opportunity for participants to attend online or in person, and the Kobe Portopia Hotel was able to successfully accommodate the size requirements. The hybrid model demonstrated our capability to deliver a successful conference and left a significant impression on our members.

FOOD

Unique gastronomy cultivated by the local community

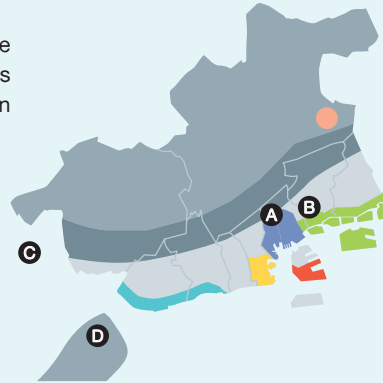

Incorporating a variety of foreign influences over its history as an international port city, Kobe has cultivated its own diverse food culture. Surrounded by abundant nature including the Seto inland sea and the rich agricultural landscape around it, the region is renowned for its high-quality products, such as Kobe Beef, and as Japan's biggest sake producer.

There is a thriving local food movement, where everything from production to processing is aided by modern advances and a collaborative environment, as well as a focus on mentoring and supporting the next generation. In Kobe, technology has been utilised to create schemes such as a partnership between major agricultural machinery manufacturers and sake breweries and farmers to safeguard sake production. Kobe holds a farmer's market in the city each weekend, where producers sell directly to consumers. This creates not only relationships with customers, but also opportunities for producers to learn from each other and educate their successors.

By creating a community who care about what they eat and where it comes from, Kobe is nurturing a sustainable and world-class food culture.

Explore Kobe's unique culinary cultivated by the local community. Experience its world-famous Kobe Beef and sake, and see Kobe's influence on whisky-production and agriculture.

INNOVATION

Innovative manufacturing ahead of the times

Kobe, a port city that evolved by trading in goods and new ideas, developed mainly through its heavy industries and advanced engineering, which continues to this day. The Akashi-Kaikyo Bridge, linking Kobe and Awaji Island, held the Guinness World Record for the longest suspension bridge from its opening in 1998 until recently. Kobe-based companies include ShinMaywa Industries, which succeeded in developing the world's highest-performing amphibious aircraft for air-sea rescue missions. In 1969, Kawasaki Heavy Industries produced Japan's first industrial robot contributing to the development of the manufacturing industry, and improving efficiency by developing various robots, including the welding robot. In recent years, Kawasaki has been aiming for a world where humans and robots can coexist, by developing humanoid robots that can help people in a disaster. Manufacturing in Kobe is ever evolving, reading the trends of the next era.

WELLBEING

Harmony between nature and the city

Surrounded by the Seto Inland Sea and Mt. Rokko, Kobe has long been inspired by the power of nature to keep the mind and body healthy. Arima Onsen, in the Rokko mountain range, is known as the oldest hot spring in Japan. It takes six million years for moisture and seawater deep below the surface to be transformed into Arima's geothermal spring water, in that time becoming rich in minerals such as iron and salt. Arima is one of the few that contains seven of the nine hot spring components that Japan recognises as having therapeutic effects.

There is a record of a 6th century emperor healing his body here, and in the Edo period (1603-1868) it was famous all over the country as a hot spring retreat, just as it is today.

Kobe's mountaineering culture has been established since the Meiji era (1868-1912). Drawing inspiration from Kobe's natural assets, to this day citizens embrace an outdoors lifestyle, running along Mt. Rokko and the coastline to keep the mind and body healthy.

From ancient landscapes and traditional culture to city-centre relaxation and cutting-edge medicine, Kobe has wellbeing at its heart.
